Portrait of Gen. Halleck.

A Yankee letter writer gives the following pen and ink portrait of Gen. Halleck, the commander in-chief of the Northern army:

General Halleck is below the medium height, straight, active, and well formed, and has a brisk, energetic gait, significant of his firm and decisive character. His nose is delicate and well-formed, That all persons who shall be held his forehead ample, his mouth by no means devoid of humer, and his eye the most remarkable that I ever saw in any man, except Professor Agassiz. It is of a hazel by the Secretary of War, the color, clear as a morning star, and Vice President of the Confederate of a most intense brilliancy.-When he looks at a man it seems as though he were literally to read him through and through.

He has a fine physique—is stout, burly, weighs two hundred pounds Senate, and such clerks in their ofmiddle aged, black hair filling fast master General, and now employed, thumbs in the arm-pits of his vest, and except such State officers as looking mostly at the ground, but the several States may have decasting quick looks, now to the clared, or may bereafter declare right, now to the left, evidently by law to be liable to militia duty, not for the purpose of seeing any- the members of both Houses of thing or anybody, but staring into Congress of the Confederate States,
